TWO QUESTIONS.

Where, oh where, is The Gem,
That sparkling little diadem
That used to cast refugent rays
Athwart our path in other days?
Tell us, John Tom, in plaintive tone,
That no longer its fate we bemoan;
Tell us quickly, and tell us true,
Where goes each week, what's our due?

.....The mountain feud is a far different thing from the occasional quarrel, and has no justification whatever.

The feud implies malice, and malice is what the law makes murder. The quarrel is the outburst of sudden indignation, and in different countries and at different times has had various characteristics in its manner of settlement. The most natural, as well as the most original, is a fight with fists. As soon as weapons were invented they were used, and from that day to this every individual man has acknowledged an unwritten law which permits and even commands him to resent an insult.....

The affair is much to be regretted, as all such are, but no provision of law or condition of society will ever prevent such occurrences.

The above extracts are from an editorial in the Louisville Commercial, and show upon their face the prejudice that exists against the mountain people. They form part of an article apologizing for the murder committed at the blue grass capital of Lexington on Wednesday, Nov. 16th, 1887—the time that LEW. BALDWIN was shot to death by THOS. M. GREEN—and that at a time when every Kentuckian, whatever his political proclivities, should have held the best feelings for his fellow. It was the event of the unveiling of the statue of JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE, a son of Kentucky second perhaps only to the immortal CLAY. Had the imposing ceremony referred to taken place in the mountains, our citizens would have behaved with a dignity becoming the occasion. The writer of the above knows this as well as any one. But, that he may instill a deep prejudice in the minds of the people against our loved land, he perverts the truth and resorts to deep and damnable prevarication to hide his hydra-headed hatred. Such papers fawn at the feet of the mountain people when seeking favors for their section, and turn to stab us in the back with falsehood at every opportunity. Such falsity is contemptible in any journal of common decency, and why the Commercial should resort to such cowardice we can not conceive, unless it emanated from an unbalanced brain. DAN E. O'SULLIVAN being the only one on the staff of that sheet with a billiard-ball head and parting his hair on the back of his neck, it looks as if he was at the burning of it. But be that as it may, murder in the blue grass is as much a crime as murder in the mountains. Aye, moreover, for there they have had better advantages of education and social training. The man who says it is not so is a LIAR, and we spell the word in capitals.

We acknowledge the receipt of the following unique invitation last week, and very much regret that we were unable to meet the fair hostess, partake of the contents hanging on "ye crane," and mingle with the social spirits of the occasion. This regret is deepened because we know the Lord of Granard Lodge, Hon. JAMES H. MULLIGAN, to be every inch a man. Indeed, our esteem for him hath no bounds. So here's to Lord JAMIE, and if he's not Speaker of the next Kentucky House of Representatives, the blame will be upon him.

RIGHT TRUSTY AND MINE HEARTY GOODIE FRENDIE. Ye shall know that sundry choice spirits and common friends intend to make merrie with me on Wednesday, ye 16th day of November, at about 9 minutes after 7 of ye Clocke, to Celebrate Ye Hanging of Ye Crane. Ye are hereby bidden to finde yourself in ye nombre of such dainty friends—on paine of incurring our wraathe and sore displeasure. And so I do commend me right lovynglye unto you, being without feigning.

Thy Friende and Servante,
GENEVIEVE MORGAN MULLIGAN.
1887. Granard Lodge,
2 myles on ye Olde Frankforte Highwaye.

P. S.—Ye shall finde homlye fare, but a heratye welcome therewith. Ye grente and wise man hath said: "Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith."

With the Charleston, Kentucky and Western railroad, and the extension of the Kentucky and South Atlantic, Mt. Sterling would soon rival any town outside of Louisville.

The Cincinnati Enquirer quotes coal at twenty-five to twenty-seven cents and deplores the distress in store for the poor people of that city this winter. There is a remedy within the reach of those people. It is the building of the Cincinnati and Southern railroad through this section. No such thing as a coal famine would ever face the poor families of that metropolis, and Cincinnati owes it to herself to see that the road shall be built before another winter.

Since SAM BURDETTE, of the Courier-Journal, has been appointed Revenue Agent, the management of that great paper is doubtless puzzled to find his successor for "In and About Kentucky." If so, we would modestly suggest that a proposition proffering a permanent position and good pay, directed to this office, might secure a fair-haired youth willing to tackle the problem.

We stop the press to announce that the Covington Commonwealth is one of the best weekly papers that finds its way to this office. Mr. CASEY, editor and owner, certainly gives his readers the worth of their money, for his argus eye catches all the good things to be found.

A distinction without a difference—Murder in the mountains is murder; murder in the blue grass is an unfortunate affair. Bah!

To every person who will send us $9 in cash and nine subscribers, we will send THE HERALD one year free.
